Welcome Back!
A warm welcome back to autumn term! We've seen a few important changes over the summer, and we're looking forward to some exciting upcoming events. Read all the updates in SEFS Director Dan Brown's message.

News Out of SEFS

SEFS students named NASA fellows
Congratulations to SEFS graduate students Lauren Satterfield and Catherine Breen, who both received the prestigious NASA award to fund their work. More

Prugh receives Presidential Early Career Award
SEFS associate professor Laura Prugh is one of six University of Washington professors to receive the prestigious award. More

Converse receives Dept. of the Interior's highest honor
Sarah Converse, associate professor with SEFS, received the U.S. Department of the Interior’s Distinguished Service Award. More
CONGRATS, SEFS GRANTS AND AWARD RECEPIENTS!

Every year, SEFS students and faculty receive awards and grants to help fund their research. You can now view them on our website. [View the 2019 grants and awards.]

SEFS Happenings

- Recent grad hired as forest manager at Center for Sustainability at Pack Forest. [More]
- The fall 2019 SEFS Seminars, made possible by the Corkery Family Chair, begin on Oct. 9. [View]
- The next discussion on wildfire risk in collaboration with PEMCO with be held on Oct. 10. [Save the date]
- J. Drew Lanham, Ph.D., will speak at EarthLab’s Doug Walker Lecture on Oct. 30. [View]

Beautification of SEFS buildings underway

Over the summer, changes have been made to the interior décor and furniture of the three SEFS buildings. Updates are continuing, and we appreciate your patience during this time of positive change. The beautification is made possible by the Byron W. and Alice L. Lockwood Endowed Fund.

SEFS Precision Forestry Cooperative hosted Nanjing University students

This summer, SEFS and its Precision Forestry Cooperative welcomed and led Nanjing University students on a 10-day tour of the Pacific Northwest. [Read about their trip.]
SEFS Alumni: Have something to share?

We want to hear from you! Send us your personal and professional updates, photos and stories! We'd also like to hear from you if you're interested in networking with or speaking to current students about opportunities. Contact sefscomm@uw.edu for more information.

MAKE A GIFT TO SEFS